

User Guide for the FSIS Repeat Residue Violator List:

Part II: Residue Repeat Violator List for Use by Livestock Markets and Establishments

This list has been designed to facilitate its use by establishments and livestock markets. This list is a rolling 12 month window listing all suppliers that have had more than one residue violation in the last 12 months either in the same establishment or different establishments. Suppliers on this list will be removed from this list when they no longer have 2 violations in the last 12 months (e.g., a supplier with 2 violations will be removed when one violation becomes more than 12 months old). New weekly entries to the list are in bold. This list can be searched by typing the producer's name in the search box. Slaughter establishments and livestock auctions can use this list to determine whether a producer has had more than one residue violation attributed to it within the last 12 months. This list is also available in an Excel format.

To search the PDF document, select one of the following options:

- Use a keyboard shortcut: Control-F on Windows or Apple-F on a Macintosh,
- Select the "Search" option in the "Edit" menu, or
- Select the icon of the binoculars in the toolbar.

FSIS has been asked whether producers can be removed from this list in less than 12 months. For example, would FSIS consider removing a producer if the producer goes three consecutive months without any new violations attributed to them? The Agency is considering this issue and will announce how it will proceed with respect to this matter in the Federal Register.
