Dear Mary,

March 22, 2016

I would like to submit comments regarding Lorna Moffat's petition.

CO2 is an inhumane way to kill. It is painful. Just try holding your breath, and you can get a sense of what CO2 suffocation is like. Animals suffer greatly with CO2 killing.

I do not eat animals, and advise people not to eat pig because of the cruel slaughter methods employed.

A better alternative for killing pigs and other animals is using nitrogen gas. It is painless. It is even approved in the Netherlands as a humane way to terminate a human's life.

Please have the USDA recommend nitrogen gassing as a method of slaughter, and to ban CO2. Using nitrogen gas to kill animals is very doable, has been proven to be significantly more humane, and is done in more advanced countries.

Thank you,
Bryan Rosen
